Tips for your RAMUS scholar report

Writing an annual scholar report is one of the conditions of holding a RAMUS scholarship and is an opportunity to reflect on and to communicate your experiences as a RAMUS scholarship holder over the past year.

There is no set format for the report; feel free to use any style or approach you wish. Photos which could be published in the RAMUS Newsletter or on the website are especially welcome. You can include photos with your report or send them as separate email attachments.

Aim for a report of about 500 to 1,000 words in length.

We prefer to receive scholar reports electronically, as email attachments. There is a Scholar Report pro-forma at http://ramus.ruralhealth.org.au/scholars which you can download and use. Alternatively, you can submit your report by mail or fax.

Your report should cover:

- your activities during the year relating to rural practice and what these activities have meant to you – please refer back to your annual Scholar Mentor Plan and include comments on your activities and relationship with your RAMUS mentor and your participation in your university's rural health club;
- any academic or personal achievements you would like to share with the RAMUS team – don't be shy about mentioning if you have received university awards or prizes, have published an article or presented at a conference; and
- feedback on your experience of the RAMUS Scheme.

Annual scholar reports showcase the impressive range of activities and achievements scholars have, plus their enthusiasm and commitment to the health and wellbeing of people living in rural, regional and remote areas of Australia.

We may wish to publish your report in part or in full, and/or your photos, in the RAMUS Newsletter, on the RAMUS website or in other National Rural Health Alliance publications, such as Partyline magazine.

As the management agency for the RAMUS Scheme, we report regularly to the Department of Health which funds RAMUS. De-identified extracts from RAMUS scholar reports are used in our reports on the Scheme to the Department.
